AFTERNOON
DELIGHT

THE BEAUTIFUL GAME >>>

With the Euro 2012 just around the corner, football fever is set to reach another high this summer. What better way to enjoy the pre-match build-up with your friends than with a bit of table footy? However, being Sur la Terre-ans, any old foosball table just won't do. You need the limited edition Teckell Cristallino Gold LE football table. This stunning table is part of the multi award-winning B.Lab Italia's new Teckell Calcio Balilla Collection and is designed not just for connoisseurs of the game, but collectors of beautifully functional objets d'art as well. Through its Teckell range, B.Lab has introduced table football as an elegant design piece for formal living rooms. Using sophisticated construction techniques, the Cristallino Gold LE is hewn from crystal glass and highly polished aluminium, and each of the tables has been crafted by skilled Italian artisans. The "pitch" is designed in transparent black-coloured crystal, while one set of the "players," along with the scoreboard and other accessories, are kitted out in 24-carat gold. Bringing a whole new meaning to "the beautiful game," B.Lab are making just fifty of these 142kg tables, with each one costing $21,000.

DISARMINGLY LUXURIOUS LINKS >>>

Roland Iten, the precision engineering genius that brought mechanical cufflinks and belt buckles to the world, has collaborated with Fonderie 47, an organisation dedicated to disarming Africa of the proliferate AK-47 rifle and transforming these destructive weapons into objects of peace and beauty. The fruit of this partnership is this incredibly desirable set of cufflinks, which, in his inimitable style, are capable - with a few twists, turns and gear changes - of connecting to become a bracelet. As limited editions, the cufflinks are made using solid white gold, titanium and, of course, steel repurposed from an AK-47. The serial number of the gun, which was destroyed to make them, is engraved on the $33,000 links along with Iten's name as their creator. They are available exclusively through the Fonderie 47 website and, by buying a set, you will be removing around 100 assault rifles from circulation in Africa.
